

Honors Contract

An Honors contract is a written agreement among a student, a faculty member, and the Honors Program in which the student agrees to do work above and beyond the regular course requirements in order to make a LSAC course an Honors course. To qualify as an Honors course, the work done must be qualitatively beyond ordinary course requirements. Typically, this work covers topics in greater depth and requires more creativity, more synthesis, more writing, and advanced analysis.

The student is solely responsible for obtaining preliminary and final approvals.

A student can count only one LASC Honors contract towards Honors requirements.

Step 1. Submit the Honors contract completed with the instructor's and your signatures on the Preliminary Approval line to the Honors Director for preliminary approval by the end of the second week of classes.

Be sure to attach a regular syllabus for the course. Also describe what additional work would you perform in order to make this an Honors course.

Step 2. Wait for an e-mail from the Honors program. If the preliminary approval is granted, pick up the Honors contract from the Honors director. Do not lose the contract; it will be required for final approval.

Step 3. At the end of the semester, ask your instructor to sign the contract on the Final Approval line, confirming its completion.

Step 4. Deliver signed the Honors contract to the Honors director for final approval.

The student has completed the work described above; the quality of the student's work in the regular course requirements and additional work was clearly of Honors quality. I therefore endorse this as an Honors course.
