Annual Recital

June Fifth
Nineteen Hundred Fourteen

1888-1914

Twenty-sixth Year

State Normal School
Moorhead, Minnesota
Eiland

The Poems by
KARL STEIHER

The Music by
ALEXANDER VON FIELITZ

Silent Sorrow
My life I've given to God, yet dream I ever, O were it my own!

Love's Awakening
She was the Lady Irmingard,
I saw her timidly kneeling
Taking the vows so stern and hard.

O Irmingard!
Thy matin song across the tide was ringing.

On the Shore
Oh heart, be still and accept thy fate; Thy bloom is past!

Moonlight
Alas, why art thy cheeks so pale, in thickest veil enshrined?

Anathema
The abbot's wrath was spoken
To me with dreadful mein:
He said: "Thy vows are broken!
Thy heart is no longer clean!"

Resignation
A curse to me is clinging!
It must have been a wrong
That I to her was singing,
That I should love the song!

A musician monk of Chinemse finds his inspiration for a song in a beautiful maiden as she is taking the vows.
The abbot discovers these songs and his bitter denunciation leads to the abrupt repentance of the monk.

Disraeli

A Play in Four Acts
by
Louis Napoleon Parker

The Characters in the Play

The Duke of Glastonbury
The Duchess of Glastonbury
Clara, Lady Pevensley
Charles, Viscount Desford
Adolphus, Viscount Cudworth
Lady Cudworth
Lord Brooke of Brookhill
Lady Brooke
The Rt. Hon. Benjamin Disraeli
Lady Beaconsfield
Mrs. Noel Travers
Sir Michael Probert, Bart.
Mr. Hugh Meyers
Mr. Lumley Foljambe
Mr. Tearle, Disraeli's Secretary
Butler at Glastonbury Towers
Footman at Glastonbury Towers
Bacot, Disraeli's Butler
Potter, Disraeli's Gardener
Flocks, a Rural Postman

Diplomats, English and Foreign Naval and Military Officers, Lords and Ladies,Liveried Servants, etc., etc.

Act I.

Scene— At Glastonbury Towers
The Octagonal Morning Room

Act II.

Scene— In Downing Street
Disraeli's Private Room

Act III.

Scene— At Hughenden
Disraeli's Study

Act IV.

Scene— In Downing Street
The Hall of Reception

MAUDE HAYES
Director of the Department of Reading and Expression

J. HAROLD POWERS
Director of the Department of Music