

GRIT Program for Conditionally Admitted Students

Who are GRIT students?

GRIT students are students conditionally admitted to the university. Previously conditional admits were referred to as individually reviewed students; these are students who do not meet the automatic freshman admission criteria. We now refer to these students as GRIT students, as they participate in the GRIT (Growth, Resilience, Initiative, and Transformation) Program.

How were these students selected?

The Undergraduate Admissions Appeals Committee reviews and rules on all students who do not meet admission criteria.

What are the conditions of admission for GRIT students?

- Students will meet with a student success coach from the ASC, ODI, or FYP two times per semester during their first year
- Students will meet with a student success coach from the CDC once per semester during their first year
- Students will be in an FYE seminar in their first semester (1 credit)
- Students will take no more than 16 credits in their first semester
- Students will be strongly encouraged to sign up for a Learning Community

What are the students' responsibilities?

All GRIT students commit to a minimum of 3 meetings with their student success coach/CDC each semester. Students will work collaboratively with their success coach to determine what other campus opportunities and resources will best position them for college success.

What will be happening at SOAR (Student Orientation Advising Registration)?

Students will attend an informational session led by GRIT coaches to learn what about the GRIT Program and what their experience will look like when they get to campus. Students and their families will develop an understanding of the conditions and support that will be available.
